Please note that Department of Transportation Certifications and Unified Certification Program Certifications we have posted on our website may not list an expiration date.

As noted below in the statement below from the USDOT, these agencies no longer issue annual certificates as proof of continuing DBE eligibility.

Disadvantaged Business Enterprise

In 2011 the USDOT enacted a rule change (49 CFR 26.83) that requires, once a firm is certified it shall remain certified until and unless it is de-certified.

As a result, DBE certification letters do not contain an expiration date. An "Affidavit of No Change" confirming that the firm is still eligible to participate in the DBE program is required every year on the anniversary. Firms no longer receive annual certification letters. The DBE directory confirms the continued certification status of a firm including the assigned NAICS work codes.

If you would like to verify our current DBE eligibility with a particular State or Agency we have listed, please visit their website and locate their DBE directory or you may contact Commercial Fabricators directly and we will assist you in getting the information you need.
